Greenwood City — Bryant Pond

— Mrs. Colista Morgan, Corres. —

As I walked to the farm this morning, I especially noted the blue of the pond, the rocky pasture and the lovely fields being mowed by my husband mounted on a fearsome tractor. I stopped to inhale the hay fragrance. The breeze swept over the farm land, shaking like a banner, the grass still waiting for the mower.

The birds which came to glean in yesterday's stubble, flew low while others caught by the wind, soared higher or were blown about.

The bees' steady hum told me that the night had refreshed the flowers which swayed under their weight, bending over like little birches being swung upon by boys. They often thrust the whole head into the deep flowers and drove off new-comers with a pronounced buzz. The honeyed reward was generous and always sheltered for their taking.

At my feet bloomed the blue-eyed grass.

"The blue-eyed grass! I sometimes wonder why so few have sung its well-merited praise.

They neighbored me in far-off barefoot days.

These bits of blue dropped from the cloudless sky.

So unpretentious, yet so full of cheer were they.

So independent, yet harmonious; So prim, erect, unceremonious; Worthy their place in June's lovely bouquet.

Only in memory I see them now.

Do they still share in that rural display?

So transient but so welcome was their stay.

Well, I have seen and loved them, anyhow.

Still of themselves they leave one deathless clue:

Oh, that we all, like them, would be "true blue!"

I gathered my greens and lettuce, my purpose for going this morning.

On my way back I again stopped to look at the buttercups and daisies which we take for granted; millions of them scampered across June's playground.

Again Frank Fletcher says it the best.

"You must look for daisies when days are longest.

Look then for buttercups, too. You will find them out where sunbeams shine strongest.

For they thrive upon sunlight and dew."

After lunch, some hours later, I walked down the road then turned left into an old lumber road.

This was steep and wooded for a little way. It led on through rugged land. As I came to the top of the first knoll it opened on to a wider view of the mountains. The pond was a deep indigo laced with half-hearted white caps, and the sky was an azure vault.

As I turned back to my road, a partridge was sitting contentedly in a stunted cedar. He seemed unaware of my presence until I went to pass him when he thundered away. I left him standing in the pleasant shade of a few birches.

Taking pictures is my weakness so of course I wished for one here but it was too dark among the trees.

A few blackberry bushes reached out and called my attention to the fact that they were here. Many had green berries already formed.

Everything has its season and every season has its color and life, wonder or surprise. Nature has her own patterns and there is always a reason for being the way they are. Today I had seen some of these patterns and thought about them as I walked home.

It had been another beautiful day. When the sun went down, soothing the brow of the foot-hills, twilight with long cool fingers reached across the valley. As evening progressed and "lamp out" time came, the sky beyond and through the trees was a glory of starlight while below over the lawn the fire flies gave them twinkle for twinkle against the vast melancholy of the woods.

TOURISTS AND SUMMER VISITORS ARE WARNED OF "WILD ANIMAL POISONING"

A statewide campaign to warn tourists and summer visitors of the dangers of wild animal poisoning has been launched by the Maine Department of Health and Welfare.

This past week more than 1,000 rabies warning posters were being distributed to summer camps, roadside rest areas and other places where campers and tourists might find sick or frightened animals.

The department's division of Health Engineering, the Bureau of Health unit responsible for licensing tent and trailer areas, eating establishments, boys and girls camps and recreational camps is circulating 700 of the posters.

The Department of Transportation will place them in their 130 roadside rest areas, the Department of Conservation will place them in state parks, the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game will place them in game farms, fish hatcheries and other areas they operate where the public appears.

Earlier this week Dr. Peter Leadley, director of the health bureau, warned that 24 cases of rabies had been identified in Maine this year, and just one had been reported a year ago at this time.

The posters explain that wild animals, if they appear friendly, may actually be sick. Or, of they are young, may only be a few feet away from angry parents who will attack to protect their offspring.

There is also a danger that household pets might come in contact with rabid animals in the rural areas of the state, according to Dr. Leadley.

Any bite that causes a skin break is considered "susceptible" and should be immediately washed with water and soap, and brought to a physician's attention as soon as possible.

The department reported Thursday two wild animals which had been kept as pets tested positive for rabies.

A baby fox being kept as a pet by a Belgrade family was found to have died from rabies when tested, said Dr. Charles H. Okey, director of the state public health laboratory.

The fox which died was one of three the family was keeping with their other pets, Okey said. They brought it to be tested when it died for no apparent reason, he said.

Rabies was found in another baby fox being raised by a family in Pittsfield, Okey said. It had also died suddenly.

Leadley said the two families risked exposure to rabies by keeping wild animals as pets. It is illegal in Maine to keep wild animals as pets.

"A wild animal that appears perfectly healthy can come down with the disease months after becoming a pet," Leadley said.

Changes caused by the disease can come over the animal so gradually that they go unnoticed, he added.

PROPOSAL FOR ACCESS ROAD IN UPTON

For the information of any who might be interested the proposal by the Brown Company received by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Williamson of Upton regarding an access road located in Upton is as follows:

Proposal
Brown Company proposes to improve and make use of a logging access road in Upton, starting from the bridge over the Cambridge River and running in a northerly direction across your "Abbott Lot" so called to lands owned by Brown Company and Seven Islands Land Company.

As you know, there is on record a description of a county road that since 1838 has provided for public access through this area.

I'm sure we both feel that there would be certain advantages to the landowners in this area if portions of the improved road were located off the original county route. Parts of the present road are so located. This would permit the landowners a control over any traffic that would use the private sectors.

The improved road would be used by the landowners involved for logging and other forest management purposes, i. e., the transport of forest products, men, equipment, etc.

Lessees, sportsmen or the general public would not be included without permission mutually agreed upon by the landowners involved.

A gate could be erected at a point where the improved road detours from the location of the original county road.

A permanent crossing agreement and mutually agreed upon rules for the use of the private sectors of this road would be worked out in advance of construction.

Sample Agreement for Use of the Road

1. Brown Company will construct a suitable gate at a satisfactory location.

2. Mr. Williamson will maintain the gate.

3. Combinations or keys will be available to the landowners involved and their agents.

4. Gate will be closed when hauling operations are inactive, i. e., week ends, holidays, mud season, etc., should either party so desire.

5. The hauling of logs, pulpwood and other freight will be limited to that volume which for economic or other practical reasons must travel this route.

6. Maintenance of said road will be the responsibility of the user and in all cases the road will be left in as good or better condition at the close of an operation as it was found in the beginning.

7. Permitted traffic will not be interrupted except during an emergency.

Other interested women are also welcome to come. For further information call the group leader, Fay Corrin, Bryant Pond 101.

"CARRY IN-CARRY OUT" IS CODE OF MAINE WOODS SAYS KEEP ME SCENIC COM.

"Carry In-Carry Out" is the Code of the Maine Woods according to the Keep Maine Scenic Committee of the Maine Bureau of Parks and Recreation.

The slogan refers to the control of litter and trash in Maine's vast backcountry. Marshall Wiebe, K. M. S. Committee coordinator, says that the old ways of back woods trash disposal just won't do anymore. In the past, he said, campers and fishermen buried their refuse or just left it for someone else to clean up. "Animals dug up the trash and scattered it and there just isn't anyone to collect litter in the millions of acres of Maine woods", he said. Additionally, it is against Maine law to dispose of trash on the property of another person.

These facts plus the tremendous increase in the number of people going into the woods for recreation have given rise to the carry in-carry out litter control program according to Wiebe.

Wiebe indicated that he believes most outdoors people are willing to carry out their trash but that "many just are unaware of the new policy". The Committee hopes to overcome this problem with a new vinyl sticker make to look like birch bark and bearing the Carry In-Carry Out symbol and the "Code of the Maine Woods."

The stickers are intended for boats, canoes, recreational vehicles and other outdoor equipment. They may be obtained from the Keep Maine Scenic Committee, Bureau of Parks and Recreation, State Office Building, Augusta, Maine 04330.

"SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY" COURSE BEING OFFERED AT UMF SUMMER SESSION

Fundamental questions relating to man in his social context will be explored in a three-week course offered July 28 through August 15 as part of the University of Maine at Farmington Summer Session.

Professor Lawrence Stofan of the UMF psychology faculty, will teach the course, entitled "Social Psychology," using his own multi-media productions as part of the content. Sessions will be held Monday through Friday from 9 to 11:30 a. m. in the small lecture hall of the UMF Learning Center.

"We're going to research and discuss questions like how, why and under what circumstances do you conform? How can you resist conforming to group pressures? Do you behave according to the expectations of others? Who really is the Good Samaritan? Why don't we come to the aid of a stranger in need?" Professor Stofan said. Other areas to be considered will be problems in consistency between what we believe and how we behave, obedience, prejudice, stereotypes, self-concept and self-esteem, leadership qualities and membership roles within a group, he said.

Students in the course will review critically six of Professor Stofan's multi-media presentations which deal with all of these topics areas through the vivid and imaginative format of sound with slide and videotape imagery. Included will be Confrontation, Transformation, Freedom and Being, Paradox of Love, Stand Up, Little Man, and Joy to the World. Other videotapes to be used are Obedience Experiment, Essay on War and Future Shock, the professor said.

The course carries three credits. Information and registration forms are available at the UMF Continuing Education Office in Merrill Hall.

To the Editor:
Disgraceful East Bethel Road is right.

I want to thank the Interested Bethel taxpayer for the write up in the June 19th edition of the Bethel Citizen.

This road is most definitely a disgrace. The only work that has been done in 14 years was a covering of tar 13 years ago and a short strip of new road which was never finished three years ago.

The amount of traffic over this road is great. People from this area travel to Rumford to work. There are many homes with children traveling to and from school.

We realize it takes money to build roads. We also get a little tired of seeing unpopulated areas getting all the attention.

There is a petition in the Manager's office now. Let's hope it lights a spark. As Mr. Dickey said "It takes many years and much money to build a road." I think we've waited enough years already.

Have you driven on the East Bethel Road lately?

— Marian Bumpus, Corres. —

The first Circle Supper will be held Thursday, July 10, in the church vestry.

Mrs. Sarah Andrews accompanied her sister, Mrs. Bertha Kimball of South Waterford, to Big Lyford Pond on business last week. They were gone two days.

Recent callers of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Bennett and family have been Mrs. Joan Marr of South Waterford; Mrs. Polly McAllister and Paul of North Waterford and Mrs. Carol Miller of West Bridgton; Mr. and Mrs. Roydon Billings, Mrs. LaForest Twitchell and daughter Christine of Bryant Pond; and the Rev. and Mrs. B. F. Wentworth of Mechanic Falls.

Mrs. Sibyl Staula and the Misses Madeline and Cora Bumpus and their grandnephew, Chris Logan, of Auburn, visited at Harlan Bumpus' Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Waterhouse of Locke Mills and Mrs. Laura Pinkham were Saturday afternoon visitors of Mrs. Sarah Andrews.

JACKSON-SILVER UNIT HOLDS SPECIAL MEETING

Jackson-Silver Unit No. 68, American Legion Auxiliary members were called to a special meeting Saturday night at the home of Sylvia Dunham, Locke Mills, the new Second District Vice President. Unit President Cathryn Lovejoy, opened the meeting and the first order of business was balloting on eight new members. Mrs. Helmi Cummings Lofreda was signed up during convention, and became the first member of 1975.

Plans were discussed for an Americanism Program and the initiation of all new members in the Fall.

Because the Unit won many awards and citations at the annual convention it was voted to buy a special album for their safe keeping.

Vice President Sylvia Dunham would like to have a get-together, sometime in August, at her home, of the Unit Presidents of her district. There are 27 in Oxford, Franklin and Androscoggin counties that comprise the Second District. The Unit will assist her in entertaining.

At the opening of the State Convention, President Cathryn Lovejoy and Sylvia Dunham presented the Unit colors to the platform and P. D. P. Fannie Cummings was given the honor of opening the convention for Department President Mary Olson, and in the final minutes of the Saturday session was named an alternate to the National Convention in Minneapolis, Minn.

Following the election of the new officers, they were installed by the National Vice President of the Eastern Division, Ruth Juclous, in a very impressive ceremony. The Jackson-Silver ladies and some Legionnaires were proud to see and hear our Sylvia, take her oath. It is hoped Warren Smith got some good pictures.

Sunday Oxford County made a good showing in the parade. The Oxford Bear was carried by Elmer Abbott of Norway and Clinton Delano of Peru. Oxford County Council President Alice Miller of Dixfield and her husband, Edward, retiring County Commander, led the delegation.

Post #68 colors were carried by Warren Smith and Stanley Sargent with Leland Dunham and Cleveland Lovejoy acting as color guard. Cathryn Lovejoy and Sylvia Dunham were the flag bearers for the Unit.

Bethel was the only town with colors from Oxford County. Leading off the membership behind the flags and stepping out proudly was our one and only Lady Post Commander, Carolyn Brooks, of Bethel.

EVERGREEN VALLEY OPENS NINE-HOLE GOLF COURSE TO PUBLIC THIS WEEK-END

Evergreen Valley's nine-hole golf course opens to the public this week end at East Stoneham. The 3,438-yard, par 36 course is considered to be one of the most challenging in the State and is the front nine to what will be a championship course when totally completed in the future.

Designed by Robert Trent Jones, Inc., of Montclair, N. J., the course cost an estimated $400,000 to construct. Superintendent Al Rehberg says the course is in great shape for play. Course designer Roger Rulewich from the Robert Trent Jones company says golfers will find "the terrain very interesting because of the variety of holes."

"Some of the fairways are carved out of the woods," he says, "while others are on open rolling terrain. Several of the holes have multiple water hazards with both creeks and ponds. All tees and greens are raised with an unusual variety of sand trapping around the greens."

"The greens themselves," says Rulewich, "are of average size and allow for a wide range of targets with a great variation in pin location. The course can play differently virtually every day."

Joe Walker, well-known Norway area pro will be the teaching professional at Evergreen Valley.

For starting times, information on greens' fees and memberships, golfers should call 928-3300.

The grand opening of the course will be Sunday, August 3, with a pro-am celebrity tournament, lobster-clambake and ball.
